Honorable Board of Supervisors
County of Los Angeles
383 Hall of Administration
500 West Temple Street
Los Angeles, CA 90012

Gentlemen:

Our goals during this biennium were geared toward improving the gardens as public-oriented facilities by constructing new interpretive centers, redesigning and labelling garden displays and providing leaflets and brochures to guide home horticultural practices.

The staff was reduced to 106.8 budgeted positions and with the additional financial adjustments that ensued, we aimed to increase the efficiency of the smaller staff while utilizing a larger number of volunteers from each garden's supporting group.

The continued support of the California Arboretum Foundation, Descanso Gardens Guild, and the South Coast Botanic Garden Foundation helped to sustain the gardens after the loss of funding and staff employees. Each group has played an important role in the continuing success of the gardens by fund raising and assisting in the general upkeep of the gardens.

The Hall of Environmental Education, totally funded by the California Arboretum Foundation's fund raising, was completed and dedicated during this biennium. Descanso Gardens Guild raised over $800,000 towards the construction of a new exhibit, administration and education complex. The South Coast Botanic Garden Foundation contributed $10,000 towards the administration and public service building at South Coast Botanic Garden.

With the dedication of the volunteers and current staff, the Department is making progress. We are confident that with their help, the Department will continue to provide attractive and high quality facilities for the advancement of horticulture in Southern California and for the public's enjoyment.

Very truly yours,

Francis Ching
Director

LOS ANGELES STATE AND COUNTY ARBORETUM

The visitor-oriented, 127-acre Los Angeles State and County Arboretum consists of plant collections from all over the world planted in sections according to their continent of origin and specialty gardens such as the Herb Garden, Prehistoric and Jungle Garden, Garden For All Seasons, Sunset Magazine Demonstration Home Gardens, Juniper Collection, Groundcover Display, Turfgrass Display, and the Tropical Greenhouse.

In addition to the usual maintenance required for the grounds, buildings, and equipment, several major garden improvements were completed this biennium. The Herb Garden, with the assistance of the Herb Society of America, was vastly improved with additional flag stone walkways, an interpretive center, redesigned and labeled garden plots, and a new sun dial. Construction of the flagstone walk was done by garden staff and major funding for the interpretive center was donated by the Hancock Park Garden Club with additional sums from the Herb Society of America, Southern California Unit, and the California Arboretum Foundation.

The nursery, responsible for growing new plant material to add to the plant collection and for potential Arboretum introductions to the Southern California landscape, was improved with the addition of a new drip irrigation system for container plants including plants grown for Arbor Day.

A total of 7,703 plants were planted and added to the Arboretum collection and 1,814 trees in five-gallon containers were donated to schools in Los Angeles County for Arbor Day.

Other garden improvements during this biennial period include a new Southwest native plant garden landscaped and planted with the aid of the California Conservation Corps and a new retaining wall in the Sunset Demonstration Home Garden to improve the north section of the garden in connection with the completion of the new Hall of Environmental Education.

A windstorm on February 8, 1980 resulted in several months of work to trim, cut and remove hundreds of damaged trees and shrubs from the grounds. A major loss was a coast redwood over 100 years old growing in the historical section. Numerous mature eucalyptus also fell, blocking roads and paths and destroying shrubs. An emergency grant from the Institute of Museum Services allowed the quick cleanup of the grounds for public use.

DESCANSO GARDENS

Development and Maintenance

Descanso Gardens, famous for its camellia forest, also has a unique rose garden and a substantial native plant garden. A tea house, Japanese garden, and Hospitality House share the landscape with lilacs, orchids, and an azalea collection. These features, combined with annuals on display throughout the year, make for an attractive garden during any season.

In addition to normal maintenance required for the grounds, buildings, and equipment, improvements were made within the limited budget and manpower to benefit visitors and to improve the efficiency in garden operation.

The appearance of the main entrance driveway was enhanced by a grove of flowering peach trees. The area around the bird station was planted with redwoods to improve the setting and create an environment more attractive to birds and bird-watchers.

Two hundred new rose bushes were added to the modern rose garden including the 1980 and 1981 AARS winners. The gardens were further improved with the addition of new flower beds for annuals and perennials.

Descanso Gardens obtains a substantial portion of its irrigation water from its own watershed area in the Hall Beckley Canyon. A high priority item was the prompt repair and maintenance of the system that provides quality irrigation water.

SOUTH COAST BOTANIC GARDEN

Garden Development and Maintenance

The most challenging facility for the department to maintain and develop is the 87-acre South Coast Botanic Garden. Constructed on a landfill, the garden continues to have problems caused by refuse decomposition and its by-products, heat, methane gas, and soil settling.

Routine maintenance has become a major project with roads and garden areas subsiding unevenly and the sprinkler system in need of constant repair. However, several improvements were undertaken during this biennial period.

A shade garden was completed to enhance the tram loading area. The Cliff Graham Memorial Shade Garden now provides a peaceful setting for visitors who are waiting to board the tram. Across the area from the tram loading zone, the first of a series of demonstration patios was also constructed. The demonstration patios will eventually display different construction materials and the uses of containers and planters for homeowners.

The annual and perennial garden maintained by the volunteers was given a new look with paths and raised growing beds constructed of used telephone poles. A dwarf apple orchard was planted and other deciduous fruit trees added to the memorial deciduous orchard.

Education/Public Services Division

This division provides a multitude of services in the operation of the gardens and its services to the public. Major functions include the collection of admission fees, publicity for the garden and its events, reproduction of booklets, maps, calendars of events, brochures, and business forms. Overall management of the historical section, plant science library, school field trips, and the operation of the tram tours are also the responsibility of this division.

Division accomplishments included the department-sponsored Arbor Day Program. In California, Arbor Day is celebrated on March 7, Luther Burbank's birthday, highlighting conservation week and promoting the preservation and usefulness of trees in the community. The Arbor Day Program consists of providing participating schools with trees in five-gallon containers, grown by the Arboretum gardening staff, and a resource packet useful for the teacher at the elementary grade level. Another successful program is the on-going guided school field trips for elementary students. The three operating gardens, with the aid of volunteers, are able to continue the one-and-one-half hour tours on early California history and an introduction to plant science called "Plants and Man."

A major program of the gardens is the dissemination of horticultural information. This is accomplished through a plant consultant service, through the distribution of printed materials, and through the Plant Science Library.

Two new publications were made available to the public. A guide to the Tropical Greenhouse is an eight page booklet focusing on the outstanding collection of frost-tender, tropical plants found growing in the attractively designed display greenhouse. The second booklet, The Brachychiton Plant Collection at the Los Angeles State and County Arboretum, is an introduction to trees of the Sterculiaceae family found growing on the Arboretum grounds. Growth and identification characteristics of the different brachychiton are carefully illustrated so the homeowner can identify them. Further horticultural information, from basic gardening books to scientific journals, can easily be obtained in the 24,000 volume Plant Science Library.

School Field Trips

For many years, the gardens of this Department have provided guided school field trips for students, grades 3 through 6, in two basic areas of study: the relationship of plants and man, and early California history. These subjects have been presented in accordance with approved State of California textbooks in the social and natural sciences. The number of school field trips made by Los Angeles County Schools is determined mainly by the amount of funding available for busing costs.

RESEARCH DIVISION

The Research Division at the Department of Arboreta and Botanic Gardens is responsible for keeping an on-going record of the plant collection growing on the grounds, collecting and exchanging plant material with other institutions, introducing new plant material to Southern California, maintaining the herbarium, and conducting plant science research.

At the present time, the plant records section is inventorying and mapping all plants growing on the grounds and correcting the computerized plant records. The Arboretum is divided into 200-foot squares. Sixty-five squares were mapped showing the permanent planting in each square.

Over 1000 different seed packets obtained from our seed exchange program with over 400 arboreta and botanic gardens throughout the world were accessioned and sent to the nursery for planting as part of the Plant Collection and Introduction Program. These plants are being grown and tested as potential new introductions to the Southern California landscape. Four plants were released to the public as Arboretum Introductions during this reporting period. These plants are: Brunfelsia pauciflora var. exima, Xanthorrhoea media, Agapanthus 'Walter Doty', and Grevillea 'Clearview David'.

The major research program at the Arboretum was the guayule project. Guayule, a desert shrub native to the southwestern United States, has shown commercial potential in the production of latex or natural rubber. The project was funded by grants from the National Science Foundation and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Research on the yield of rubber from guayule was conducted through hybridizing, use of bioregulator chemicals, and cultural research for disease resistance.

During this reporting period, a two-year grant project supported by the National Science Foundation on waste water and the fate of virus in soil was terminated. As imported water becomes expensive in Southern California, the use of waste water for cultivating plants in parks, golf courses, and parkways has become increasingly important.

SUPPORTING ORGANIZATIONS

Supporting organizations provide the Department with volunteers, sponsor fund raising activities, cultural and educational events, and support the Department in improving each of the gardens with funding for capital projects, services, and supplies. The California Arboretum Foundation is the supporting foundation for the Los Angeles State and County Arboretum.

California Arboretum Foundation

The major accomplishment during this reporting period was the completion and dedication of the new Hall of Environmental Education. This 10,000-square-foot building provides the badly needed indoor space to house major flower shows, exhibitions, and fund raising events. A fully equipped kitchen is included in the Hall. The Hall was constructed with funds raised by the California Arboretum Foundation and donated to the County of Los Angeles.

The Foundation donates approximately $50,000 per year for equipment, supplies, and repairs in the operation of the garden. In addition, the volunteers donated over 60,000 hours to special events, garden maintenance, and services to the public provided through the Arboretum.

As of June 30, 1981, the Foundation membership totaled 3,300. Las Voluntarias y Los Ayudantes, the volunteer group of the Foundation, has an active membership of 309.

Fund raising events for the two years included the Baldwin Bonanza and the Queen Anne Frolic. The annual Baldwin Bonanza plant sales were held the first weekend in May. Net proceeds from the two plant sales were in excess of $80,000. The Queen Anne Frolic, an open house of the historical area, provided an evening of entertainment and netted proceeds over $17,000. The event is held biennially.

Other Foundation activities included the operation of the gift shop, summer picnic concerts, open house at the Santa Anita Depot, and the Fall Garden Fair.

Descanso Gardens Guild

Descanso Gardens Guild is the non-profit organization dedicated to serving Descanso Gardens.

Membership in this organization was 1,300 as of June 30, 1981.

The Guild's primary objective has been the raising of funds for a new multi-purpose hall and entranceway complex. Building for the new complex is planned to start shortly in the coming fiscal year. The total amount raised was $888,532.00.

The Guild donates approximately $15,000 per year towards the operating expenses, supplies, plant materials, repairs to equipment, and purchasing of new equipment and tools.

Over 35,000 hours of volunteer work was also contributed in aiding the garden from propagating plants to conducting tours, operating the gift shop, and sponsoring fund raising events.

Major Guild events included summer concerts, Paseo por Descanso walks, plant sale, arts and crafts festival, and a Christmas show.

South Coast Botanic Garden Foundation

Organized in 1961, the South Coast Botanic Garden Foundation assisted the Department in developing a new botanic garden over a landfill that was once a diatomaceous earth mine.

During this reporting period the Foundation provided the funds, through donations and grants, for the Cliff Graham Shade Garden, the Charles Wiley Garden, and a new gift shop from funds provided by an ARCO grant.

The Foundation allocates approximately $12,000 per year toward the garden for supplies, tools, and repairs to equipment, including the tram. An additional amount of $10,000 was paid to the county towards the building fund that was used to construct the administrative public services center.

The active volunteer group donated over 22,000 hours to help with the maintenance of the gardens.

The Foundation sponsored an annual plant sale and operated a gift shop for fund raising. Other cultural activities included the annual Christmas show, Sunday afternoon lectures, walks, adult workshops and classes through Harbor Community College, and cosponsorship of many flower shows.
